
someone is new here

Posted by Meemy Ibraheem - 2005/12/04 06:57

hi ;

I`m a new here . I really want to speak English . My friends say that my English is good but I do n` t confidence .I can` t speak fluently I have to use the easiest words to explain what I want to say . So ,I reasech for who can help me to improve my language .I found this site but I `ve a big problem that is how to buy for the lessons and how can I start my first lesson .

Can anybody help me here

Thanks alot
Marshmallows

Re:someone is new here

Posted by Meemy Ibraheem - 2005/12/05 06:02

I`m So saaad , nobody replayWhy ????????????????????

Re:someone is new here

Posted by Mike Huskins - 2005/12/05 09:52

Meemy Ibraheem:

Judging by your written English, I would imagine that your spoken English is quite good. But speaking English can be difficult, and it can take a lot of practice to develop more confidence. We would be happy to help. You are of course always welcome to explore the features of our website, but lessons with a live teacher are usually much more helpful.

It sounds like you are having trouble with scheduling a teacher on the site. We will contact you separately via email and walk you through the process.

Best,
Mike

Open English World
<http://www.openenglishworld.com>

Re:someone is new here

Posted by Meemy Ibraheem - 2005/12/05 10:36

Thanks alot Mikebut really I have agreat desire to speak English >and I will be more gratefull for you .
